Dear [REDACTED]

STATINTL

This is to express our appreciation for your assistance in arranging the briefing which we had recently in your agency. We believe that your comments and those of Mr. [REDACTED] were very helpful in explaining the role and difficulties of the CIA in American foreign policy processes. Your willingness not only to arrange the seminar sessions but also the transportation was very much appreciated. In an evaluation conducted after our return to campus, the participants listed this briefing as one of the best in our schedule.

Thank you once again for your assistance.

Sincerely,

J. Douglas Nelson

Adm. Stansfield Turner
Director, Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Admiral Turner:

During the latter portion of January, 1980, I will be bringing a seminar group of approximately 20-25 undergraduates dealing with American Foreign Policy to Washington. The purpose of the visit will be to expose students directly to officials in key decision-making centers of American foreign policy. In this regard we would like to have the opportunity to meet with some representatives of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Since the seminar is primarily concerned with policy-making processes, it would be especially helpful if one of your representatives could discuss the kinds of intelligence that are useful in foreign policy-making, the relationships between the various agencies in the intelligence community, and the kinds of problems that intelligence organizations face in being timely and accurate.

I realize that time and other constraints would make it impossible to treat each of these topics in a very comprehensive fashion. My purpose in listing them is to indicate the kinds of subjects that would be most useful to us. If it is possible to schedule our group, I would be most pleased to discuss specific arrangements with you or one of your staff at your convenience.

Thank you very much for your consideration with our request.

Sincerely,

J. Douglas Nelson, Ph.D.
